

Do I know You???

By Linda Eaglewolf

Art by: Rainbow Warrior Mariah

Do I know You? Of all the people in the world would you ever have thought of asking yourself that question? I find myself asking that to the person in my reflection. Years ago when I started this journey of a medicine warrior, Crooked Arrow told me to look into the mirror and ask myself the question " Who Am I?" Now I feel I have a lot to catch up on, or is it I have a lot to learn from this very special person I now see my reflection?

I'm now not only healthy physically, but I'm also healthy spiritually, because after all they both coincide. You can't have one without the other. As I see myself healing continually physically, I see and feel my spiritual being constantly healing as well. Which one is stronger or are they equal? I'm proud of me! As I heal I'm growing. My eyes are opening, my heart is accepting and my higher-self is climbing higher than ever. It is like the Universe is opening up to me for the first time or may be I am finally allowing it to. Like when you open a window to let all that fresh air in. I think clearer without prejudices. I DON'T MEAN THAT OF THE SKIN COLOR. No way because I am a child of the rainbow with lots of Native American blood as well as other blood lines. What I mean is that my mind and thoughts no longer have limitations or boundaries. I know now what I am capable of accomplishing and all of this I give credit to my God. My Savior! I am free of the bondage I put on myself. The bondage created out of fear that held me back from moving forward on my enlightened journey.

I am not saying I don't fall. I tend to sometimes slide on the deck of my ship of life, but no one is forcing me to stay down. I've experienced God's love for me as he multi task. He is busy steering my ship with one hand and helping me up when I fall with the other hand. It is like a continual adventure trip for me because I learn something new everyday about myself. I feel me getting stronger, more happier than sad. I smile more, laugh and even sing now. I love this feeling of joy that life is giving me. I fell loved not only by my God but also a great love of myself! Probably most people don't find the time to think about that to much. Wanting to be loved by so many people, not even given themselves a second thought. Don't you count??? Aren't you somebody??? I know I AM ! I read some where about some one asking if you could change anything about yourself what would you change? For once I have no second thoughts. I would say, " Nothing". I love who I am and where I came from. What I've been through and God knows I've been through hell and back numerous times. I got a really bad sun burn on those trips. ( smile ) But seriously it made me who I am today and I'm really proud of me and the fact I had to go through those tuft times to realize who I am.

I have an angel for a son and a brand new body, mind and spirit, which I consider a miracle blessing from God, since I am a cancer survivor. Someday I will tell you about my little angel, who is love. I have learned unconditional love from my son and I am still learning from him daily. He is unconditional love, freedom of spirit and strength. He is Anthony Bear Paw, a down syndrome child of God. A true blessing to me. Remember the first step in moving forward is to love yourself unconditionally and then you can really show that love to others.

Live in love and faith, Linda Eaglewolf